(Sept 30): Syarikat Bekalan Air Selangor Sdn Bhd (Syabas) has announced a delay in the upgrades to water supply machinery due to be completed this afternoon, meaning more than 180,000 households in Petaling and Kuala Lumpur will still be without water until the work is finished.

“The inlet valve replacement work on the Bukit Gasing Suction Tank and work on the bypass valve to the Bukit Gasing Pump House in Petaling Jaya, under the Mitigation Project 2, are facing delays due to some unexpected technical issues on site,” said Corporate Affairs Division executive director Priscilla Alfred in a statement released today.

The work has affected 103 areas in Petaling District (176,831 accounts) and in Kuala Lumpur District (7,000 accounts) since yesterday.

“Due to the delay in the upgrades, the resumption of water supply in the affected areas, will be delayed and take a longer time than the scheduled recovery period,” she said but did not give a new date when water supplies would resume.

“Syabas will continue to provide emergency water supply through tankers to affected consumers,” she said but added that people should use water sparingly because of the large area involved and priority being given for emergency use, and supply to hospitals, dialysis centres and charity homes.

Consumers can access details and the status of water supply in their respective areas by downloading the mySyabas app for free on any smartphone. – The Malaysian Insider
